

Processional Examples

The following are examples of different processions. There are no set rules about how it should be done, but these are some guidelines to follow.

Generally, the Bride's family is on the left facing the minister and the Groom's family is on the right. Read through and you'll get the idea. (Front rows should be reserved for family members.) The flower girl always goes right before the bride.

Generally, the bride and groom (usually the bride) are the ones who ultimately decide how people are going to walk, but as the minister, you will most certainly be asked the question. It's a good idea to familiarize yourself with the different options so you can be knowledgeable when you are asked.
